Slow in speed and even slower of mind, the lumbering Zombie may look a little scary, but he's completely harmless in every way. Everything he does is slow, mindless and repetitive, from zoning out while watching TV, to waiting in line at the grocery store, to stacking one brick on top of another to build a perfectly even, completely featureless wall that stretches along for miles and miles.

If you interrupt him, he'll just stare at you blankly before going back to whatever he was doing before. If you put an obstacle in front of him, he'll keep bumping into it over and over again until someone turns him around. If you pick him up and move him to a new place, he'll start doing something mindless there instead. The only thing that seems to motivate him is his cherished turkey leg – if you dangle it in front of him, he'll stretch his arms out toward it and follow it wherever it goes.

- The only thing that the Zombie is afraid of is ordinary table salt. It terrifies him!
- The Zombie has watched so much TV that he has become a master of trivia...but nobody ever asks him to share any of it.
- The Zombie loves Halloween. Nobody runs away from him, and everyone thinks he has the best costume.

Fun Facts

- Every Collectible Minifigure has a unique head design! Some more than one!
- Although Collectible Minifigure heads come in many colors, none come in flesh tones. However, LEGO has made flesh-colored minifigure heads for licensed sets (like Star Wars® and Harry Potter).
- Collectible Minifigures have lots of detailed printing, on fronts and backs of heads, headgear, uniquely printed tiles and accessories, front and back torsos and legs, even the sides of their arms, but only 1 Collectible Minifigure has inner-leg printing (the Horseback Rider).
- Series 1 and 2 had an additional barcode on the back of each of their packages making it relatively easy to identify which Minifigure was inside.
- Series 3 and on have “bump codes” on the bottom edge of the packets making it possible to identify which Minifigure is inside.
- Every Collectible Minifigure except the Toy Soldier comes with a display stand. Series 1-11 all come with a plain black display stand while Team GB come with a white printed display stand with the Olympic and Team GB logos.
- Although almost all LEGO sets include extras of certain pieces like swords and plumes, LEGO stopped including extras of most pieces after Series 2.
- Most Collectible Minifigure elements are made of ABS plastic; but some are made with rubber.
- Collectible Minifigures come to retailers in boxes of 30, 60, or 120.
- Series 1 and 2 had a Regular Retail Price (RRP) of $1.99. Series 3-11 had a RRP of $2.99. Team GB was released only in the UK and Ireland (in recognition of the 2012 Olympics) and had a RRP of £1.99.
- Of the 45 females in Series 1-11, 27 are rare or very rare, and only 1 is common.
- Many of the uniquely designed and produced heads, torsos, legs, and accessories have become available to purchase in the Build-A-Minifig bins at official LEGO stores.
- Every Series 1-11 Minifigure has stats ranging from 0 to 5 in strength, creativity, and speed on LEGO’s website. Mr. Gold has the highest stats with a perfect 5 in all areas! The Hockey Player, Downhill Skier, and Island Warrior tie for second best stats with 5’s in strength and speed, and 4 for creativity. The Sleepyhead has the lowest stats with only 1 strength, 2 creativity, and 0 speed!

The Cheerleader is perpetually filled to bursting with energy, excitement and enthusiasm. She prefers cartwheels and handsprings to plain old ordinary walking, and she waves her pom-poms around wildly whenever she talks, which is pretty much all of the time.

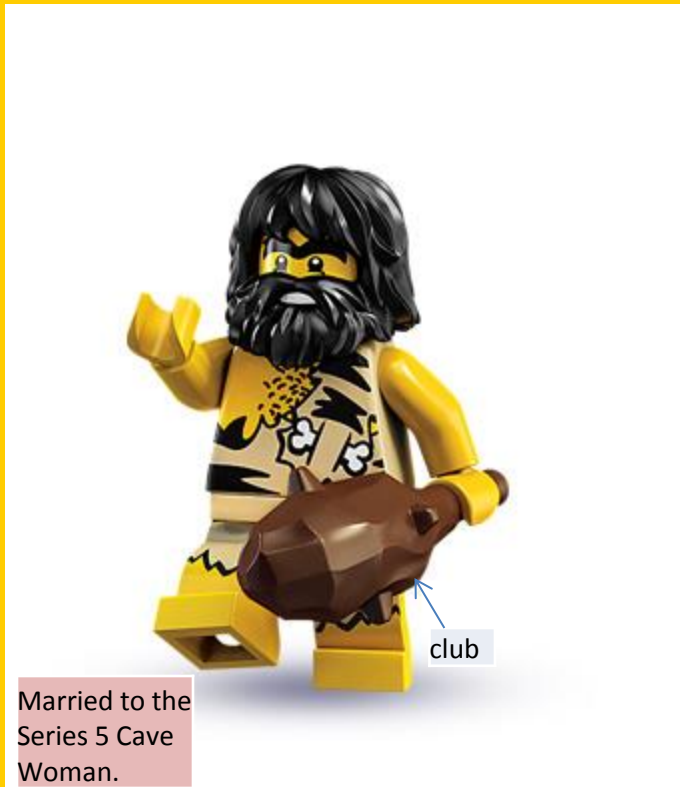

The Cheerleader loves to cheer people on, no matter what they’re doing. Whether they’re changing a light bulb, building a wall or just crossing the street, she’s always there with a peppy cheerleading routine to encourage them to do their best and never give up. It can actually get kind of annoying sometimes, but her perpetual good mood and sunny smile are so contagious that it’s hard to really mind.

- The Cheerleader can cheer in nine different languages, including Spanish, French, ancient Latin and Esperanto.
- Banana splits with blueberry sauce are the Cheerleader’s favorite food in the whole world.
- The Cheerleader once did a hundred flips in a row...and boy, was she ever dizzy afterwards!

This would-be inventor from the prehistoric past is always tinkering with sticks, rocks and the occasional bricks he finds lying around, trying to invent something new. Of course, everything he comes up with has already been invented – he’s a Caveman with a tiny little brain, after all – but that doesn’t stop him from trying. He never gets jokes and usually needs things explained to him with gestures and pictures...and even then, he gets it wrong most of the time.

The Caveman is very strong and always hungry. If something looks like it might be food, he’ll try to take a bite, and if it runs away, he’ll lift his club up above his head and chase it down. Not a lot of people know it, but he’s also an excellent artist who can create incredible landscapes and murals using only the simplest of tools!

- The Caveman has a pet woolly mammoth named Henry.
- The Caveman’s proudest accomplishment was inventing the wheel. He was very sad when he found out someone else did it first.
- The Caveman sometimes falls asleep at the natural history museum and wakes up on display.

Everything in life is a joke to the mirthful, merry and mischievous Circus Clown. Whenever things get too dull, up he pops with a banana cream pie to toss, a bottle of seltzer to spray, or a honk of his horn to brighten your day. You can always count on him to appear with a funny gag at just the right moment to lighten the mood.

The Circus Clown is a master of physical comedy, and it's a good thing, too – aside from a honk of his horn or his big red nose, he never makes a sound, even when doubled-over with laughter at his own silly antics!

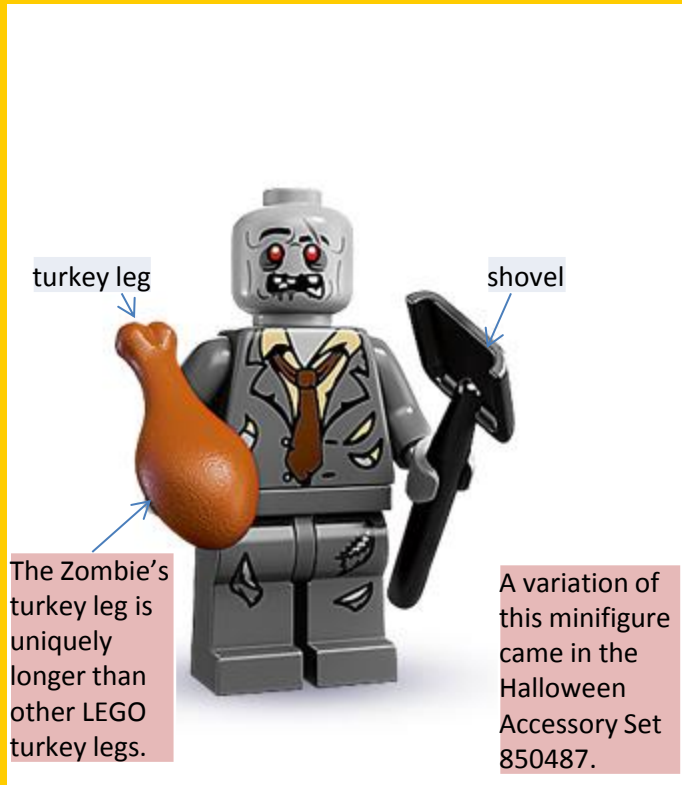

- The Circus Clown can communicate with geese by honking his horn.
- Because most Minifigures don't have noses, very few people know what that red thing in the middle of the Circus Clown's face is.
- The Circus Clown grows his own water-squirting plastic flowers in a little garden at home.

The young Skater practices all the time to be the greatest skateboarder in the world. He lives for speed and tricky stunts, and when he’s around, any and every surface becomes his own private skate park. His board is his prize possession, and he always makes sure to keep it clean and shiny, even when he gets totally grungy himself.

The Skater is extremely competitive, and he can’t stand to see anyone do something better or faster than he does. His rivalry isn’t just limited to other skateboarders – he’ll try to out-race trains and out-jump pigeons flying in the park, just to prove he can. He hasn’t beaten them yet, but he’s sure he will some day!

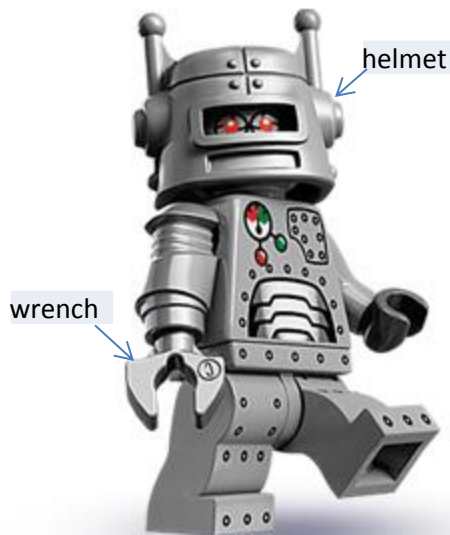

- The Skater hopes to someday find a way to beat his toughest opponent: himself! (He thinks time travel might work.)
- The Skater’s most terrible secret is that he can’t ride a bicycle without falling off.
- The Skater’s ultimate dream is to star in his own LEGO Island video game. · The Skater went to the hospital 12 times from car accidents.

Had the name Axon Klaxon in LEGO Universe.

With his powerful metal body and mighty claws, the Robot may look tough, but what he really loves to do is build, build, build! Constantly clanking, beeping, whirring and sending out jets of steam, he works tirelessly day and night, searching out spare bricks wherever he can find them and stacking them together to create the biggest, tallest and most incredible structures that you can possibly imagine. In fact, he loves constructing things so much that sometimes he forgets to recharge his circuits and freezes in place, right in the middle of building.

He's slow to react to things that he doesn't expect, and prone to occasional short-circuits, with a tendency to walk right into holes, spin around suddenly in place or crash through walls without even noticing. He also has a bad habit of "finding" bricks in other people's creations and marching off with them, right over or through any obstacles in his way, but don't blame the Robot – it's just his programming!

- The Robot once crossed an entire ocean by walking along the sea floor. The Deep Sea Diver was pretty surprised to see him there!
- The Robot's internal parts include three tin cans, string from a kite, a coat hanger, a wind-up music box, and an old tea kettle.
- Nobody knows who originally built the Robot years and years ago. Even the Robot himself doesn't remember.

The Demolition Dummy exists to take things apart. He is compelled to disassemble everything that he comes across into its component parts, leaving piles of pieces behind wherever he goes. Although he doesn't seem to be very bright or creative, he is extremely persistent, and it's difficult to stop him once he starts trying to deconstruct something. No matter what anyone else does, he always seems to find a way to accomplish his task.

Having the Demolition Dummy and the Robot in the same place together is like watching a perpetual motion machine – one constantly builds while the other un-builds, over and over again. No one really knows what motivates the Demolition Dummy to take everything he sees apart, but he certainly seems happy about it when he's done...until he spots the next thing to disassemble, and then off he goes!

- The Demolition Dummy got his driver's license on his first try.
- Sometimes when he's bored, the Demolition Dummy takes himself apart and waits for someone to come put him back together.
- The Demolition Dummy is terrible at jigsaw puzzles...but he's great at bowling!

Appearing out of nowhere with a flourish of his cape and a twirl of his elegant, curly moustache, the mysterious Magician is the ultimate in stylish showmanship. He loves a good audience to appreciate his incredible and sense-defying magic tricks, but watch out – not only is he an amazing performer, but he’s also a talented prankster as well! He’ll confuse, bewilder and amaze with a mix of sleight-of-hand and impossible feats, and the more surprised his audience is, the better.

Whether he’s making a flock of doves fly out of his wand or pulling a giant rabbit out of his magic hat, the Magician is always ready to put on a spectacular show...right up until he vanishes without a trace in a flash of lightning and a puff of smoke!

- The Magician enjoys playing miniature golf in his time off, but he usually cheats.
- One time, the Magician’s hypnosis act backfired and he spent two weeks thinking he was a giant chicken.
- The Magician’s trained rabbits are specially bred in a remote monastery high in the hidden mountains of Timbuktu.

Only three things matter to the Super Wrestler: his mask, his honor, and the time-honored art of wrestling. He throws himself at every challenge that comes his way with gusto, counting on the strength of justice and his muscular arms to save the day, no matter the odds or danger. When victory is his, he throws out his arms to the sound of roaring cheers and wild applause...which is a little odd when there doesn't seem to be anyone else around.

There are few situations that the Super Wrestler doesn't think can be solved with a bold battle cry and a fancy wrestling move. The surprising thing isn't that he treats life like it's all a big wrestling match – it's that so far, it's always worked!

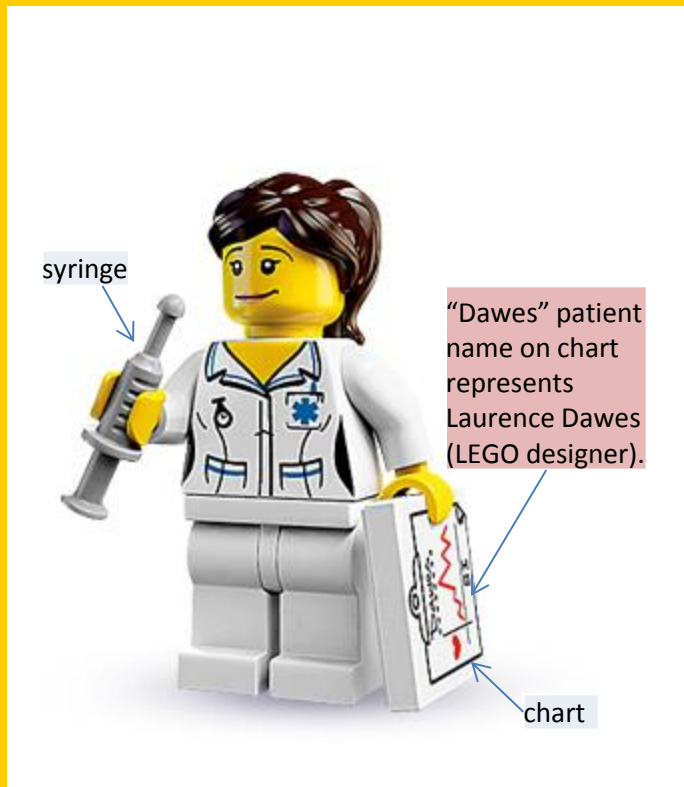

- The Super Wrestler irons his cape every night. · The Super Wrestler would be willing to accept a wrestling challenge from the Lizard Man.
- The Super Wrestler once out-wrestled an octopus to save a bus full of kittens.
- The Super Wrestler inherited his mask from his father, who got it from his grandfather, who made it at school.

Cheerful, professional and devoted to making people feel better, the Nurse believes that everybody around her ought to be as healthy as possible at all times, even if that means covering them from head to toe in bandages and checking every reflex in their body with a little rubber hammer. She can tape up a boo-boo, dash to the scene of an accident with a wheelchair or build a fully-functional MRI machine out of random spare pieces, all in a dizzying blur of motion...whether her chosen patient wants her to or not!

The Nurse thinks that every problem can be solved by expert medical care. If she sees a child crying because its balloon is stuck up in a tree, she'll try everything from checking its temperature to taking X-rays, trying more and more complicated procedures when nothing seems to solve the problem. She doesn't understand why the tears stop as soon as she gives the child a new balloon for being such a good patient, but she's proud and delighted that her treatment worked anyway.

- The Nurse once came up with a cure for the common cold, but she got distracted treating a patient and forgot what it was.
- The Nurse knows 48 different recipes for chicken soup.
- The Nurse once treated an entire school for nose lice before she found out they didn't really exist.

Stealthy. Sneaky. A cunning master of martial arts. None of these things describes the Ninja, although he sure wishes they did. He tries his best to dramatically blend into the shadows or hide in plain sight like all the other ninjas can, but no matter what he does, he always seems to mess things up. The truth is that he’s just plain clumsy, and no matter how gracefully he may start a back-flip, creep along the rafters or launch himself into an epic sword battle, he always manages to trip over his own feet, fall off the ceiling, or bonk himself on the head with his ancient and mystical blade. Also, he’s afraid of the dark.

No one is quite sure how the Ninja ever managed to graduate from ninja school. But no matter how bad he may be at his chosen profession, he always keeps trying and never gives up, convinced after each blunder that the next time, he will prove himself a true ninja warrior for the ages.

- The Ninja was discovered as a baby on the doorstep of his clan’s temple, with a note that said “Please make me a ninja!”
- The Ninja failed his final ninja exams a record 123 times.
- The Ninja’s sword has magical powers, but all he knows how to do with it is make really good ham and cheese sandwiches.

Had the name Ace Warprider in LEGO Universe.

This brave and intrepid space traveler doesn't quite realize that he's not out exploring the cosmos. The Spaceman walks in long, slow bounds across the landscape, somehow ignoring the fact that gravity is perfectly normal for everything else around him. He's friendly and fearless, always happy to investigate a strange new place or salute a stranger with a universal-greeting hand gesture, but his unshakeable belief that he's dealing with alien creatures and worlds can lead to a lot of confusion for everyone involved.

The Spaceman carries a sci-fi gizmo for just about any situation, including hi-tech binoculars, a grappling hook, a jetpack and even a tiny, remote-controlled space rover. Just be careful if you startle him into thinking that you're an attacking hostile alien – his futuristic Electro-Zapp blaster fires a zig-zagging electric beam that can zap the hair right off a minifigure!

- The Spaceman always carries a book of useful alien phrases. You never know when you'll need to order lunch in Venusian!
- The Spaceman sleeps in a special bunk bed with magnetic straps to keep him from floating away during the night. He hates that!
- The Spaceman came here from the future. He travelled back in time thanks to an accident involving a runaway comet and a black hole.

The brave and fearless Forestman is always arriving just in the nick of time to save the day. Whether he’s swinging down on a vine to rescue a damsel in distress, leaping boldly from the castle battlements to duel an evil duke, or making an incredible trick shot with his bow and arrow to help a friend in danger, he is at all times the very model of a chivalrous hero of legend and yore.

The Forestman loves to make a good first impression and is always practicing his dramatic entrances to get them just right. He’d come to the rescue anyway, of course (it’s just in his nature to right wrongs and fight injustice wherever he finds them), but it’s terribly disappointing for him if no one is around to see him gallantly arrive on the scene for his latest feat of swashbuckling derring-do. He’s only sad for a moment, though, and then it’s off to battle the bad guys and save the day once again!

- The Forestman once rescued two princesses, saved three villages from evil trolls, and defeated an entire band of pirates in one day. Before breakfast.
- The Forestman has a lifelong fear of crocodiles.
- Despite years of living in the woods, the Forestman still can’t tell poison ivy from the regular kind.

The Deep Sea Diver seems like a nice enough fellow, but no one can tell for sure, because no one can understand what he’s saying. Whenever he speaks, all that comes out is burbles and bubbles. He might be easier to understand if he ever took off his diving mask and air tank, but he thinks that he can’t breathe without them and always keeps them on, even when he’s walking around on land – which is a pretty funny sight, thanks to those big flippers on his feet!

The Deep Sea Diver loves the water and can often be found swimming around in fish tanks and bathtubs, hoping to spot rare and exotic fish. He loves to tell stories about his amazing undersea adventures, but of course it’s impossible to guess what he’s actually talking about. His gestures and sound effects certainly make it all sound very exciting, though!

- The Deep Sea Diver spent a week in Atlantis, but nobody back home could understand him when he tried to tell them about it.
- The Deep Sea Diver has personally discovered over thirty new species of sea life, including the Chocolate-Chip Cookie Shark and the Inflatable Squid.
- The Deep Sea Diver once traveled twenty-ONE thousand leagues under the sea.

This hero of the Old West is a master of the lucky shot. With the help of his trusty pair of six-irons, the Cowboy can hit any target at any distance, no matter how large or small. It's a talent that he's used to get himself out of plenty of sticky situations, and he's happy to show it to anyone who asks for a demonstration.

Though he's a bit of a show-off, the Cowboy is impeccably honest and fair, and always raises his hat to the ladies. He enjoys a good game of cards and a campfire cook-out, especially if someone's brought along his favorite: chocolate, marshmallows and graham crackers. He never stays for long in any town, though, because he's always out on the trail looking for his lost horse. After all, who's ever heard of a cowboy without a horse?

- The Cowboy can lasso a fly right out of the air, but he never knows what to do with one after he's caught it.
- The Cowboy likes to go on vacation to the big city, where he finds all of the noise, crowds and traffic very relaxing.
- While some kids go to camp, the Cowboy was sent to live with wild coyotes every summer instead.

The Spartan Warrior's favorite thing in the world to do is fight. He keeps his spear, shield and crested helmet polished and clean at all times, just waiting for the next big battle to start. The problem is that there really isn't much of a call for ancient Spartan soldiers these days, so he mostly sits around and watches historical documentaries on TV.

Since he doesn't get to do much fighting, the Spartan Warrior tries all sorts of things to keep himself in fighting shape. He's not a big fan of the more traditional vampire activities (though he has to admit that the flying is pretty cool), and much prefers a fruit smoothie to the classic beverage of choice. Of course, no one believes these obvious tall tales, which makes the Fisherman a little cranky, because every single one of them is absolutely true. It's not his fault that he had to throw his catch back because it wasn't giant squid season yet, or that the batteries in his camera died that time he caught a sea serpent off the coast of Greenland. Biplanes, triplanes, jetplanes, and seaplanes: he's piloted them all through every kind of wind and weather, and he's had all kinds of incredible experiences along the way. He's discovered long-lost mountaintop civilizations, battled sabotaging gremlins at 20,000 feet, and once he even flew a rocket to Mars to stop an invasion of water-stealing Moon Men.

Yes, the Pilot has led a colorful and exciting life indeed. He's long-since lost track of how many years he's been flying, although he definitely gave the Wright brothers some helpful advice at Kitty Hawk in Nineteen-Ought-Three. And if you even think of suggesting retirement, he'll just chuckle at you with a wink of his eye and a twirl of his elegant moustache, and start the propeller spinning for his next grand flight!

The Samurai Warrior is a legendary champion, famous for both his skill with the sword and his deep sense of honor. He will never break a promise or refuse to help a stranger in need, and the only reward he ever accepts for his noble deeds is a nice cup of hot tea afterwards.

The Samurai Warrior's only problem is that he's so extremely serious all the time. You can try telling him a joke, showing him a funny picture or even tickling him, but he'll never even crack a smile. It's rumored that he once laughed at one of the Circus Clown's gags, but if you ask him, he'll absolutely deny it!

When it's freezing cold outside and everyone else's teeth are chattering, the Snowboarder feels right at home. With nerves of steel, she'll brave the steepest slopes and the wildest jumps, confident that as long as there's snow on the ground, she can do anything. But as soon as the weather turns warmer and the snow starts to melt, she's out of there and heading wherever it's chillier!

The Snowboarder doesn't like to be anywhere that's even a little bit hot. She eats ice cream in the winter and volunteers at the aquarium's penguin pool in the summer. And what she likes to do most of all is head up a snow-covered mountain with her beloved board and have an icy good time in the cold!

Was originally planned to be a male minifigure.

As a member of a shadowy criminal organization feared throughout the seven galaxies, the Space Villain really knows his outer space bad-guy stuff. He can hotwire a rocket neutron drive in zero-G, melt through solid plasmodic hypersteel with his nova-ray blaster, and sneak past a FuturonCorp security-bot in under 3.6 quarkoids, all while blindfolded.

Of course, full-time space villainy isn’t easy. Over the stellar cycles, the Space Villain has lost an eye in a warpship chase over Spyrius IV, misplaced a leg in the meteor mines of the Insectoid hivefleet, and he thinks his right arm might be somewhere at the other end of a black hole. Still, he wouldn’t give up his job for all the quasar rubies in the M-Tron Nebula...which just so happen to be the very next thing he’s planning to steal!

The Sumo Wrestler has dedicated his life to the ancient art of sumo. He has earned the nickname “The Immovable Object” for his ability to stand perfectly still while his opponent tries to push him over or out of the sumo ring. He’s recognized wherever he goes, and is always happy to stop and sign autographs for his many fans.

He may be big and strong (in fact, he’s VERY big and VERY strong), but the Sumo Wrestler is also extremely health-conscious. He watches his calories, makes sure to get plenty of fiber in his meals, and always finishes his vegetables. Like he says, you can’t get big and strong without taking good care of yourself!

The Mummy’s favorite thing to do is put ancient mummy curses on people. He just loves it when you wake up with slimy frogs in your bed, or suddenly find your shoelaces tied together, or have your toast always fall on the floor with the butter-side down.

But the Mummy doesn’t really mean any harm, and he’d be surprised if he ever found out that people thought he was being mean to them. As far as he knows, putting curses on people is just what mummies are supposed to do!

Hailing from deep within the mystical forests of the Elflands, north of the great Western Kingdom, the Elf is a skilled master of the longbow and a wilderness scout without equal. He can walk over dried leaves and brittle twigs without ever making a sound, leap effortlessly through the tall treetops, and track a troll raiding party for days with no rest. You may have heard that the Elves are a mysterious and secretive people, but in fact they'll be happy to tell you all about their musical artistry with the harp and panpipes, their sworn friendship to the beasts of the woods, and their quest to rescue the enchanted Golden Goblet from the cavern of the Emerald Dragon. And it was true: from tricycle races to soapbox derbies, he has always been happiest when moving as fast as safety and the laws of physics will allow.

As soon as he was old enough to enter competitions, he was off and racing, constantly tweaking, modifying and tuning up his cars for more and more speed and power. Now that he's become a professional driver, he can finally do what he's always dreamed of doing: tour the world's racetracks in one of the fastest things on wheels!

The Gorilla Suit Guy is a mystery. Who is he? Why is he wearing that suit? Does he think he's an actual gorilla, or did he get lost on his way to a costume party? He certainly acts like the real thing, or at least like someone who's watched a lot of old movies and TV shows and thinks that's how a gorilla should act. And he sure is wild about bananas.

The Gorilla Suit Guy could turn up anywhere. In the park, at the beach, hanging out in a store window or jumping up and down on a trampoline, he tends to pop up in the most surprising and unlikely of places. And while he may not be a real gorilla, somehow no one ever wants to be the one to tell him that!

Nobody knows where the Space Alien came from or how it got here. It just showed up one day with a map of the planet and an Alien-to-Human dictionary, but neither one works very well. The map puts Washington D.C. in the middle of France, and the dictionary lists cows as a type of locomotive...which made things kind of complicated that time when the Space Alien tried to take a train to meet the President.

The Space Alien wants to conquer the planet, but it keeps getting sidetracked by interesting tourist attractions, so it hasn't really gotten around to the whole taking-over-the-world thing yet. It's also not sure what to do with the Earth once it's been conquered, but it's pretty sure that whatever it is, it'll be totally awesome!

To the Baseball Player, nothing is as important as good teamwork. He memorizes all of his team’s game strategies, pays close attention to the coach’s signals, and does his best to help win no matter what position he’s playing. It’s not about personal fame or the number of home runs he hits – it’s about everybody having a good time on the field, and giving the crowd in the stands a terrific game to watch.

The Baseball Player isn’t just a professional athlete; he’s a big fan of the sport, too. He has an ever-growing collection of baseball memorabilia, from Bob Battingsley’s original rookie card to the signed bat of the world-famous “Brick” Ruth himself. But his top favorite is his mint-in-package collection of historic baseball stadium hot dogs. He’s almost got the complete set!

Bio alludes to Don Mattingly and Babe Ruth, famous Baseball players.

The Kimono Girl's most favorite tradition of all is haiku poetry. She writes haiku verses about everything that she sees and does during the day. She's gotten so good at it that she can have entire conversations in lines of 5, 7 and 5 syllables!

He's still looking for just the right creepy assistant, but he's sure that one will answer his ad soon.

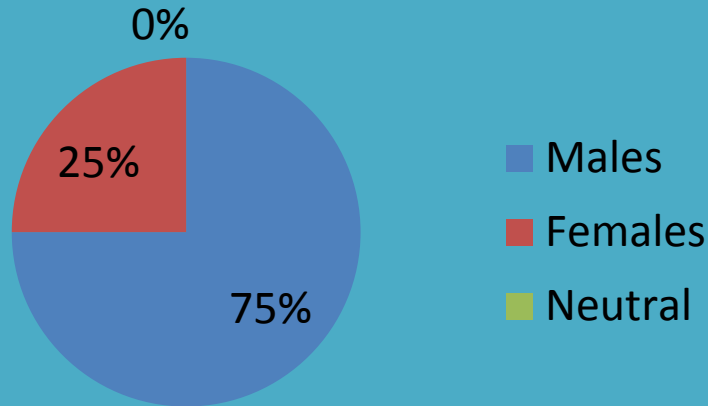

On the other hand, there are the experiments. The Monster was one, but just like the rest, it didn't turn out quite as planned. It was supposed to be all evil and scary, but instead it turned out friendly and nice. No matter how hard he may try, the Crazy Scientist can't seem to create anything really bad. He just doesn't know where he's going wrong, and it's driving him crazy!

The Ice Fisherman might be the most patient person in the world. He'll carefully choose just the right spot on the ice to drill a hole, then he'll lower his fishing line and wait...and wait...and wait. He might wait for hours. He might wait for days. Sometimes he even waits for weeks! But eventually, there's always a tug on the line and up pops his catch.

It's not just fish, though. It seems like the longer the Ice Fisherman waits there at his little hole in the ice, the better the thing he catches will be. He once caught a ship in a bottle. Another time, it was a treasure chest full of gold and jewels. And once, after three long months of sitting and waiting through the cold Arctic winter, he even fished up a magic lamp with a wish-granting genie. (The first thing he wished for? A warmer coat!)

While the Caveman is trying to build new inventions, the Cave Woman is the one who actually gets all the practical things done. She smashes rocks to make tools, creates clothing out of hides and skins, chases off big meat-eaters and assembles clever traps for catching supper using sticks, stones and bits of shells.

Despite having a bigger brain, the Cave Woman is very fond of her dim-witted mate. Recently, she’s been thinking about doing some inventing herself, perhaps starting with a written language and a stone-based calendar system. Maybe then she’ll finally be able to get the Caveman to remember his own name...not to mention her birthday!

First minifigure to have a molded tail.

The Lizard Man lives to trample cities beneath his big green feet. Of course, since he’s really just a minifigure of normal size wearing a lizard suit, that’s not as easy as it sounds...so instead, he spends hours building his own meticulously detailed miniature buildings and then stomping all over them while making roaring noises. When your greatest dream is to be a giant monster, it’s tough to find new hobbies. The Lizard Man sometimes thinks about becoming a professional wrestler, but the Gorilla Suit Guy never writes back to any of his challenges. On the other hand, rumor has it that the Super Wrestler would be happy to take him up on the offer anytime!

The Zookeeper has loved animals ever since she first visited the monkey house at the zoo as a small child. From cats and dogs to elephants and ostriches, she's studied every species and knows all the healthiest foods to feed them and the best habitats and activities to keep them happy. Living and working in LEGO CITY, the Zookeeper has had to look after some pretty strange creatures in her career. Of course, there are the usual camels and bats and colorful jungle frogs, but nobody ever warned her about dragons and rock monsters, not to mention what that one team of adventurers brought back from their expedition to Dino Island!

Bio mentions Dragons from Castle and Ninjago themes, Rock Monsters from Rock Raiders and Power Miners, and Dinosaurs from the Adventurers' expedition to Dino Island.

The rugged Lumberjack is a true man of the outdoors. He builds his own log cabins, tends his own campfires, cooks his own stews and brews his own maple syrup. The only times he ever goes back to the big city are when he needs to drop off a load of freshly-cut lumber or buy a new cap because his last one got eaten by a bear. Although the Lumberjack is strong of arm and staunch of heart, he isn’t always the best at aiming trees the right way when he chops them down with his shiny axe. Half the time, they end up crashing right down on top of him – so it’s probably a good thing he’s also pretty hard of head!

Quote is based on a song by the Monty Python comedy troupe.

The Small Clown is totally serious about making people laugh. He’s memorized every joke book in the library, subscribes to several clowning magazines, and has a graduate degree in Advanced Mirth from Clown University. His philosophy is that if you’re not laughing, he’s not doing his job right.

The way he sees it, he may be just a small clown, but he’s got really big shoes to fill. All of the famous and beloved clowns of yesteryear are counting on him to uphold their classic traditions of hilarity, and he doesn’t want to let them down. That’s why he rehearses hard to have the very best and funniest clown routines around. Plus, it lets him hit people with pies!

Inspired by
Sherlock Holmes.

If you've got a major mystery to solve, the Detective is your minifigure. He's famed across the land for his amazing deductive skills, and he never gives up on a case, no matter how impossible it may at first appear. He just whips out his magnifying glass, follows the clues, and always arrives at the right solution in the end.

You may have heard of some of the Detective's most famous cases. He's the one who single-handedly solved the Brickster's Baffling Brick-Napping, the Sam Sinister Switcheroo, and the Mystery of Timmy's Nose. Why, he even tracked down a missing pet from the Racing Drome...and robot monkeys don't leave footprints!

Bio references The Brickster from LEGO Island, Sam Sinister from Adventurers, Timmy from Time Cruisers, and the Racing Drome and robotic monkey from the Drome Racers.

You can tell him his armor is squeaky, his axe is rusty or his iron helmet is totally unfashionable for modern dwarf society, and he'll just grin and laugh. But say one word about his prized whiskers and you'd better hope you can run away fast!

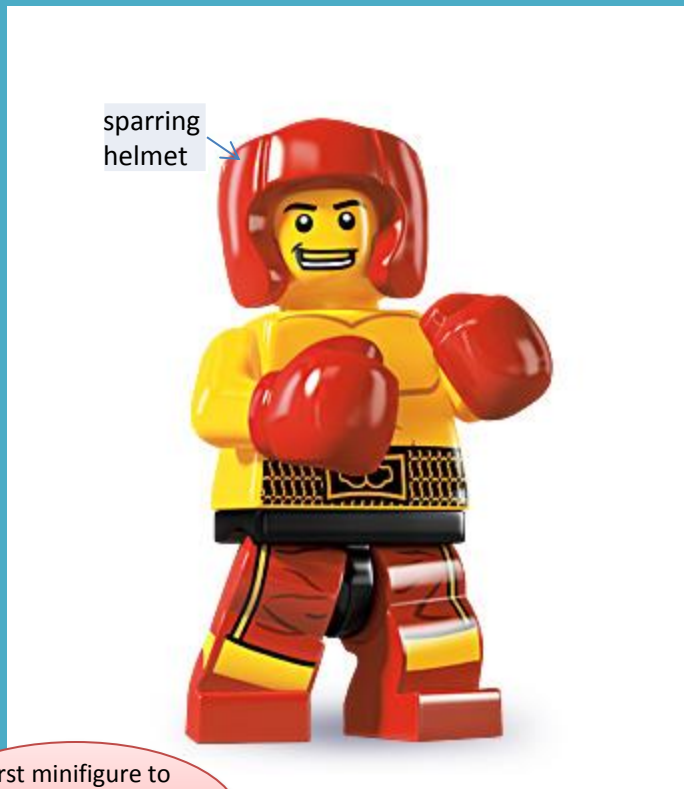

Ever since he was a lad in the deep-down Dwarven Kingdom, the Evil Dwarf has been proud of his bristling black beard. It turned him into quite the bully! The Boxer has defeated every opponent he’s faced in the ring so far, and he’s always looking for the next big challenge. She may have a golden throne, banquets five times a day and legions of loyal servants to obey her every command, but she also knows all about tax codes, crop rotation and pyramid construction regulations, not to mention the ancient game of politics.

The Egyptian Queen loves to disguise herself as a commoner and listen to what her subjects are saying about her. Of course, since everybody knows what she looks like (she's on all the coins and statues, after all), they're always careful to say only nice things. The problem with being a no-good criminal in LEGO CITY is that the place is just chock full of police stations. You can hardly turn a corner without running into a friendly officer or three out on patrol. So as much as the Gangster may try to make his fortune through unlawful acts, he usually finds himself spending a lot more time fleeing than committing felonies!

All of those totally out-there conspiracy theories about little gray men from outer space are absolutely 100% true – or at least, that’s what the Classic Alien believes. You see, he’s been out of communication with the home planet for a while (thanks to that whole Area 51 thing), and all of his recent news has come from what he’s read in supermarket tabloids and seen on the internet. Those reporters and bloggers really seem to know their stuff, so he figures they must have the real scoop. After all, if it’s not all true, then what’s he even doing here?

He considers any kind of loss to be a crushing blow to his honor, and so he strives to be the very best at every competition imaginable, whether great or small. Most importantly, though, he always insists on winning by the rules. To the Highland Battler, there’s only one thing in the world worse than losing – and that’s being a cheater!

Lady Liberty is a symbol of creative freedom to all Minifigures, no matter their theme of origin. Holding her torch up high – and sometimes waving it around when she gets really excited – she is a beacon of inspiration to all who see her.

Lady Liberty protects against oppression of all kinds. Villains and tyrants may try to topple her, but she always stands tall (well, as tall as any Minifigure, anyway), stirring the hearts of patriotic citizens everywhere to build bigger and grander brick creations than ever before.

First minifigure to be based on a real world monument.

Whether he’s playing cards or trying to outride the sheriff, the Bandit always looks for the unfair and easy path to fortune. He’ll take secret shortcuts that get him stuck in cactus patches, swipe the fastest stallion in the county only to have it throw a shoe, and rig sharp-shooting contests that end with saloon signs crashing down on his head. As long as he keeps trying to cheat, this bad guy will never win!

Now that he can walk and talk and think (as long as somebody remembers to keep his key wound up), he's hoping to find his true place in the big LEGO® world.

But what does a Clockwork Robot do? He can walk around making beeping sounds, and he has lots of shiny buttons and dials, but he feels there must be more to life. He's tried copying some of the other Minifigures, but he kept falling off his horse, deep-sea diving made his gears rusty, and masked wrestling was definitely a big mistake. Maybe he'll just try hugging everybody he sees instead!

And while that much is true, the rumor that the ferocious beast guards a fabulous treasure is not...in fact, he's only in there because he can't find his way out!

The thing is that the Minotaur is just terrible at directions. He used to have a map of the place, but he lost it somewhere and ever since, he's wandered around the labyrinth hoping to run into somebody helpful who can show him where the entrance is. Unfortunately, everyone that he's met so far either tries to fight him or runs away. Maybe it's the horns...or the axe...or the cow-breath?

Hippity-hop! Hippity-hop! Here he comes, hopping down the lane – it’s the happy, jolly Bunny Suit Guy! He’s got the whole outfit: the fuzzy white costume, the tall flappy ears, and even a big orange carrot to carry around. And what made him decide to dress up like a bunny? He has absolutely no idea!

As far as the Bunny Suit Guy knows, he’s always been the Bunny Suit Guy. He’s not entirely sure what a Bunny Suit Guy is or does, but he’s determined to do the best job of it that he possibly can. As far as he can tell, that means hopping around, eating carrots and making people smile. Fortunately, the Bunny Suit Guy is good at all three!

Inspired by Easter Bunny costumes.

Has the most pieces of any LEGO minifigure (counting extra flower piece).

The Bride has been busy getting ready for her big day! All of the invitations have been sent out, the floral arrangements are arranged, the banquet is prepared and the facilities are perfect. The cake has just the right number of layers, her gown and veil are as beautiful as she always dreamed they would be, and the groom looks so handsome in his tuxedo and bow tie.

Everything is ready...now the wedding just needs to go off without any problems! What if a guest is allergic to the salad, or somebody drops the cake, or a swarm of bees goes after the flowers, or alien attack-bots crash in the middle of the ceremony? There's so much that could go wrong today – here's hoping it all works out!

Ruler of a vast underwater kingdom, the Ocean King is the master of all the world’s seas. His enchanted trident gives him absolute control of the waves and tides, and woe to any sailor who dares to anger him! Fortunately, he’s easily appeased by rare treats from the surface world, and a cookie or pizza slice (no anchovies, please!) left in just the right tide pool will usually ensure a smooth and tranquil ocean voyage.

Just make sure it’s the proper kind of gift. The Ocean King doesn’t take kindly to people who drop litter into his deep blue domain, and he’s been known to summon raging storms and whirlpools if he’s having a bad day, or even just a mild headache. It might sound like an overreaction, but you try wearing a crown made of pointy gold shells all the time and see how calm you feel!

Created in honor of Tara Wilke's (LEGO designer) grandfather who grew up in Scotland.

Bagpiping runs in the Bagpiper's blood. His father played the bagpipes, and so did his grandfather, his great-grandfather and their grandfathers before them, all the way back to the day the beloved musical instrument first arrived in Scotland.

He's played his pipes for weddings, marches, wrestling matches and haggis-eating contests (he's also played them at chess tournaments and libraries, but for some reason his enthusiastic performances didn't go over so well then). Other musical styles may come and go, but the Bagpiper knows in his heart that the bagpipes will last forever!

No matter the stunt, no matter the danger, the dashing Daredevil risks it all for each and every spectacular show. Flaming hoops, long-distance canyon jumps and giant stomp-powered launchers are a breeze for this fearless fellow, who always keeps his cool in even the most perilous situations. It’s the normal, everyday situations that give him pause. Driving a motorcycle at full speed up a ramp and over a dozen garbage trucks is no problem – but buying stamps at the post office? Yikes! He’ll waterski blindfolded through a school of snapping cyber-sharks, but don’t ask him to find the beans at the grocery store, or he’ll run away screaming. It looks like the daring Daredevil has definitely picked the right line of work!

The members of the Galaxy Patrol are an elite squadron of deep-space heroes who are dispatched to the most remote and dangerous sectors of the galaxy to fight cosmic evil wherever it appears. With their heavy-duty space armor and helmet-mounted tactical computers, they’ve got the gear, the training and the attitude to always get the mission done.

To join the Galaxy Patrol, you’ve got to be as tough as space-nails, able to resist the mind-control powers of a Pluuvian Brain-Beast, and capable of holding your breath in vacuum for at least 42 quarkoids. Most recruits wash out, but the ones that are left are the best of the best, ready to defend the universe from interstellar threats of any and every kind – no matter how many eyes, claws and tentacles they may have!

Some minifigures train hard all their lives to be good at their chosen sport...and then there's the Tennis Ace. Where other tennis players might wait for the ball to come to them, he hurls himself toward it with all his strength, swinging his racket around wildly. Instead of carefully aiming the ball, he hits it in any random direction and hopes it lands inside the court's lines.

It's not the most traditional way to play, and yet somehow it manages to work. Despite a complete lack of strategy, patience and timing, the Tennis Ace just keeps moving up in the rankings. Maybe it's luck, maybe it's well-hidden natural talent and maybe it's sheer gusto, but whatever it is, it sure does drive the other players crazy when he wins!

Inspired by Tarzan.

Growing up in the jungle isn't as easy as you might think – just ask the Jungle Boy! Being raised by a family of chimpanzees seems like a lot of fun, but you sure do end up eating a lot of bugs. And swinging around on vines sounds great until you realize how slippery they are and how far down the ground is. Yep, the jungle life might be full of fresh air and freedom, but it's also full of scrapes and bruises a-plenty.

It's neat to be able to speak the languages of the beasts, but it's not like they have anything really interesting to say...plus, talking to a leopard doesn't keep it from trying to eat you. And do you know how hard it is to check your text messages way out here? All things considered, after a few more nights of sleeping in trees with nothing but a loincloth for warmth, the Jungle Boy might just start thinking about moving back to civilization!

Inspired by the 1960's peace-loving movement.

The friendly, good-natured Hippie loves everything in the entire world. Rain and shine, day and night, puppies and kittens – they all bring a happy smile to his face. With a fashion sense that hasn't changed since the Sixties, he never stays in the same place for long, preferring to roam across city and countryside alike, stopping only to smell the flowers and spread his simple message of peace, love and LEGO bricks.

As a pioneer of the Free-Building movement, the Hippie rejects all building instructions. Instead, he believes that true creativity lies in making a big pile of your bricks and putting them together in whatever way most inspires your imagination. According to him, it's the ultimate groovy way to reveal your true inner soul as a builder!

Other computer whizzes can argue all they like about what kind of computer or operating system is the best one – the Computer Programmer knows that the only way to be a real expert is to master all of them. He knows everything there is to know about computers and how to use them, from the biggest old-time mainframes to the tiniest next-generation nanotech prototypes, and he’s always glad to share his expertise with anyone who needs his help – which is just about everyone eventually! He can debug a server in ten seconds flat, track down and wipe out even the toughest viruses, recover data from completely melted hard drives, and yes, he will help you set up your e-mail signature. In his spare time, he programs his own video games, catches up on the latest posts in his favorite web forums, and hangs out with his pet robo-cat. When you’re a skilled Computer Programmer, the future is always today!

When danger threatens the village, it's up to every Viking to help out, and the Viking Woman has proven herself to be one of the greatest warriors of them all. Stalwart and strong, she stands with sword and shield raised, ready to face and fight off any army or monster – or army of monsters – that dares to attack the wooden walls.

Even after the battle, the Viking Woman's talent continues to shine. As the keeper of the village's lore, she knows all the great poems and ballads of her people, and can belt them out in truly impressive song. The Evil Knight loves nothing better than looting, pillaging and laying waste to peaceful kingdoms. He’s worked for all of the big baddies over the years, from Basil the Bat Lord to Cedric the Bull. He even once spent a memorable summer as one of Vladek’s mystical Shadow Knights, and was delighted that he got to keep his glowing red eyes afterwards.

Some bad guys take up villainy for money, and others for power or land, but the Evil Knight just likes being a wicked henchman. As long as he has a suit of spiky black armor, a sword and orders to cause trouble for a noble king or an innocent village, he’ll be happy to smash things up until somebody tells him to stop. In fact, he’s been part of so many evil armies that he sometimes forgets who he’s working for at the moment!

A similar but different version of this Minifigure came in the Rock Band Minifigure Accessory Set 850486.

Inspired by rock style of late 1970s, early 1980s. First official female musician minifigure.

Whatever you may say about the punky, pink-haired Rocker Girl, you can’t ever call her humble! From her clothes to her music, she goes through life with complete confidence in herself. She knows she looks and sounds awesome up there on stage with smoke and lasers flashing all around, and she lives for the way the crowd roars with excitement when she starts playing that next power chord.

The Rocker Girl’s unshakeable self-confidence has always been her greatest strength. No matter what troubles she faces – cancelled shows, electrical failures and bad cases of rockin’ pneumonia – she always powers right on through, knowing that her next performance will be the greatest one yet. And the best thing of all is that she’s right!

With her fine red hood and a basket full of tasty treats, she's sure she won't run into any wicked wolves...or bands of forest bandits...or giant spiders...or nasty ogres...say, what was that noise over there behind that tree?

Goodness, is that a raincloud up in the sky? Maybe this isn't the very best day for a stroll outdoors. The woods do seem a little chilly, and it would be such a shame if she were to catch a cold. Besides, her grandmother has a whole pantry full of food already, not to mention a brand-new microwave oven. Yes, staying inside today sounds like a very good idea. She'll try again tomorrow – and next time, she'll bring some friends along for back-up!

Created as a substitute for rare Series 1 robot for fans. Compare their quotes!

Everything that the Robot does, the Evil Robot tries to do the opposite. If the Robot spends all his time seeking out bricks and building giant towers out of them, then the Evil Robot dedicates himself to taking them apart and scattering the bricks everywhere – under beds, inside shoes, beneath fridges and anywhere else they’ll be hard to find.

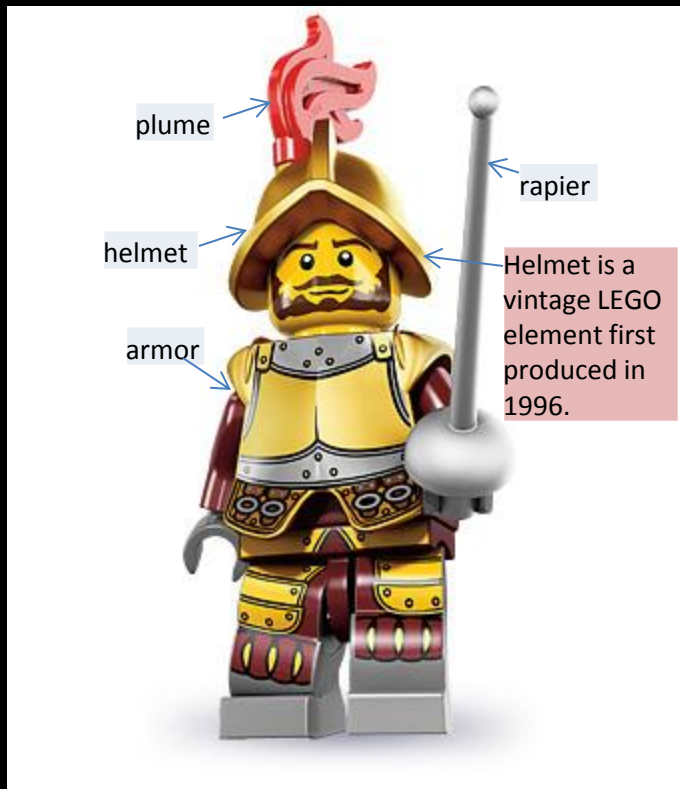

The Evil Robot’s single-minded drive to be the Robot’s opposite does have certain flaws. Since the Robot walks forwards, the Evil Robot is determined to walk backwards everywhere he goes. The Robot is a hard worker, so the Evil Robot tries to be as lazy as possible. Despite all this, villains keep recruiting him to help out with their bad-guy schemes. It’s probably because he looks so cool, but they usually learn pretty fast that having an evil robot on your side isn’t always as useful as it sounds!

The Conquistador likes gold. REALLY likes gold. It's not so much about the wealth; he just thinks that it looks really good, and he'd like all of his stuff to be made out of it. If he had his way, he'd be living in a solid gold house, taking a nice bath in a gold tub full of golden coins. And the towels and shampoo would be gold, too.

The Conquistador has traveled all across the world in search of gold, but he hasn't had a lot of luck so far. For some reason, the people he meets always want to keep theirs, which seems pretty selfish to him – especially that Leprechaun, who just up and disappeared. Fortunately, he's heard about this newly-discovered place called the Aztec Empire. He figures he'll stop by there next and see if they've got any gold they don't mind sparing!

The Lederhosen Guy really is a giant fan of lederhosen. He goes to lederhosen conventions, subscribes to lederhosen magazines, and even writes a lederhosen blog. He also enjoys attending cultural festivals with his friends the Highland Battler and the Bagpiper. They may not share his love of lederhosen, but at least they agree that it's nice to feel the breeze on their knees!

With the help of her lasso, the Cowgirl has been known to stop a charging bison, hoist the broken end of a bridge across a canyon, knock a water tower down to put out a barn fire, and set a runaway locomotive back on its tracks. About the only thing she hasn't been able to do with it so far is help the Cowboy track down his missing horse...but she sure aims to try!

It might make the other players look at him a little funny, but he knows it’s always best to be fully prepared.

He trains in snowshoes, because they might have to play during a blizzard in Antarctica. He trains in scuba gear just in case they have a game underwater. He trains in math, physics and history to make sure he can calculate interception angles, tackling speed and battlefield (or football field) strategy. The Football Player knows that all his hard training will pay off some day, and when it does, he’ll lead his team to awesome victory!

Thanks to his weighted belt and boots, he can spend countless hours wandering through deep-sea trenches (as long as someone up top keeps pumping air into his diving hose) or hunting for shipwrecks (which aren’t hard to find when the Pirate Captain is around). He isn’t afraid of sharks or giant squids. Even the grumpy Ocean King considers him a friend, and has been known to ask the Diver to take care of his pet catfish when he goes out of town. Life, to the Downhill Skier, is just like a snow-covered mountain. There may be twists and turns on the way down, or hidden obstacles lurking just beneath the powder, but as long as you keep your knees bent, your poles straight and both eyes on where you’re going, you’re sure to get there all right in the end. Oh yeah, and it’s a good idea to watch out for trees!

It must be stated from the outset that the Businessman is simply an ordinary office worker. He is emphatically not, for example, a highly-trained secret agent who goes on daring undercover missions on behalf of the Crown, traveling under a humble guise in order to thwart the plots of mad scientists and evil masterminds all around the globe.

The Businessman’s bowler hat is most certainly not packed with hi-tech devices ranging from sophisticated listening gear to a deployable grappling line. Likewise, his perfectly normal briefcase does not contain a hidden microcomputer, and his newspaper is not a well-camouflaged data-pad with a remote satellite uplink. Nor do his glasses allow him to see in the dark or magnify distant objects a thousandfold. No, he’s just a regular, everyday businessman, and any rumors to the contrary should be strictly ignored.

She spends so much time flying to and fro (not to mention up, down, over and under) that she occasionally gets her thoughts a little bit jumbled-up. And she's just so carefree that she's even forgotten what kind of fairy she's supposed to be!

Is she a fairy godmother? A tooth fairy? One of those fairies who flits around meadows making dewdrops appear and flowers bloom? She tries being all of them, but she keeps mixing up what she's supposed to do. She's granted wishes to frogs (they wanted flies), left glass slippers under pillows (fortunately, they were very strong slippers) and transformed rocks into handsome princes (they mostly just sat around). Fortunately, thanks to the laws of fairy magic, no matter how mixed-up she may get – with a wave of her magic wand and a flutter of her wings, there's always a happy ending!

Rumor has it that a legendary minifigure known as Santa comes flying through the sky on his sleigh to give out shiny new bricks to anyone who needs to get some building done. Then, as soon as he's done, he's off on his way again with a belly-shaking laugh.

But who is this jolly old man of mystery? He's supposed to live up at the North Pole, but the LEGO® Arctic team never reported running into him during their millennial expedition. And where does he get all of those bricks, if not at the LEGO factory in Denmark? The world may never know for sure!

After all, he might be one of the children of the night, but that doesn't mean he wants to spend all his time there!

In fact, the Vampire Bat actually loves being out in the daylight. Sunny days at the beach are his idea of perfection (though he does get a lot of sand in his fur and it's not easy to see through the glare when your eyes are so well-adapted to the dark). Now that there are a bunch of human monster-fighters trying to foil his master's plans, he's secretly rooting for them to win!

Whatever the opposing team’s cheerleaders do, she feels like her squad needs to do it even bigger, better, and with more gusto.

Sometimes that leads her to go a little over the top with the cheering displays she puts together. It all started simply enough, with synchronized cartwheels and the occasional human pyramid. But that led to acrobatics...and then fireworks...and then parade floats...and then they hired that skywriter jet...and before her squad knew it, more people were coming to watch the cheering than the game!

He plays every part to perfection, from Romeo to Juliet (the lead actress was ill, and the show must go on, after all...), and receives a rousing standing ovation after each and every performance. He’s really good at celebrity impersonations, too.

The Thespian started his career as a minor background player on the old LEGO Studios set, but since those days his fame has really taken off. He constantly gets offers to appear in big-budget movies and television shows, but he always declares that heart will forever belong to the stage. Of course, as much as he enjoys acting, he does occasionally confess that what he’d really like to do is direct!

Bio mentions the Studios Theme. Also called “Actor” in official LEGO material.

- The Actor’s prop skull was used as a snack bowl at the “Brick of Dawn” music video wrap party.

A real pirate is a merciless, rotten son of a sea dog, and that’s exactly what the Pirate Captain aspires to be. He certainly looks the part with his rugged eye-patch, hook-hand and peg-leg, but he has to admit that he’s had a few hiccups along the way.

First of all, his ships keep sinking. No matter whether it’s a man o’ war or a dinghy, any vessel capsizes within five minutes of him coming aboard. Also, he gets seasick really easily – sometimes just a picture of the ocean is enough to set him off. Worst of all, he’s having real trouble coming up with a piracy name. All the good ones – from Ironhook to Brickbeard – seem to already be taken. If he can just come up with a name to strike fear into the hearts of landlubbers everywhere, the Pirate Captain figures the rest of his problems will solve themselves!

Bio mentions 2 previous Pirate theme captains (Ironhook and Brickbeard).

- After a tough day of failed plundering and pirateering, the Pirate Captain likes to relax with a cup of hot chocolate. Chocolate makes everything better.

The only LEGO alien with a pink brain

With a name far too regal (not to mention too long and too unpronounceable) to mention here, the Alien Villainess rules over a vast interstellar empire devoted to one thing and one thing only – total universal conquest! From her towering citadel on the Imperial Throneworld, she sends out fleets of flying saucers to every corner of the galaxy, ordering the commander of each to invade and conquer any planet they find.

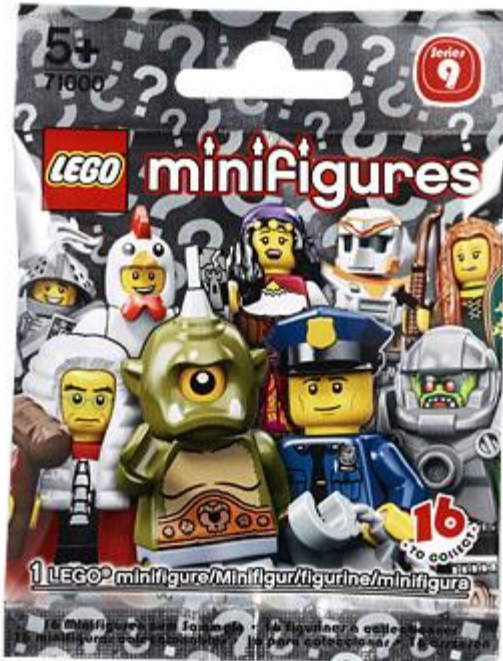

From the top of her pulsating purple brain to the tips of her tentacles, the Alien Villainess craves nothing less than absolute control over all of outer space. That’s why it’s so annoying when people try to stop her, especially that pesky Intergalactic Girl who keeps arriving at the last minute, escaping her brilliantly inescapable traps and messing up her plans. Don’t they realize that the universe would be so much better if only everybody would swear eternal allegiance to her?

- The Alien Villainess secretly dreams of launching a successful intergalactic clothes line.

Bottle was originally labeled “Chateau Pretesacque” in honor of Raphael Pretesacque (LEGO designer) but there wasn’t enough space to print it on the label.

The Waiter is the very model of balance, manners and poise. Perpetually patient and polite, he always knows exactly what drink to serve with each turkey leg, sausage link, or pizza pie his customers order...although it might be because he only has one bottle, and he serves it every time.

There’s just a single thing that rattles the calm of the cool and collected Waiter, and that’s unexpected noises. Something as simple as a hiccup across the room is enough to startle him, and a sneeze once almost made him drop his tray. You don’t even want to know what happens when somebody nearby burps!

Forever watchful and alert, the Cyclops is the only inhabitant of a distant, uncharted island. He stares out to sea with his one unblinking eye, roaring at anyone who sails too close to the shore. But although he looks big and mean, he secretly hides a very sensitive soul beneath his scowling exterior.

Who wants to be a monster all the time? There isn't a lot to do when you live all alone on a deserted island, so the Cyclops spends most of his spare time writing poetry and building sculptures out of driftwood and seashells. He hopes to one day find a friend who really understands him – and with whom he can finally see eye-to-eye!

More than anything else, the Hollywood Starlet wants to work with The Thespian to create the best movie ever made. She’s tried everything, but so far he’s refused to step in front of the camera. Maybe now that she’s won the top film award, he’ll finally change his mind...and in the meantime, she’ll be acting her heart out on the silver screen!

There's only one thing that the Roman Emperor likes better than being obeyed, and that's making up new rules for everybody else to follow. He's especially fond of creating extra months in the year and naming them after his favorite food and pets. And if anybody doesn't like celebrating the 5th of Hamstertober, well...that's why he keeps the Roman Soldier around!

Even she doesn't know which ones are which. It's led to some very happy customers – and some extremely annoyed ones, too.

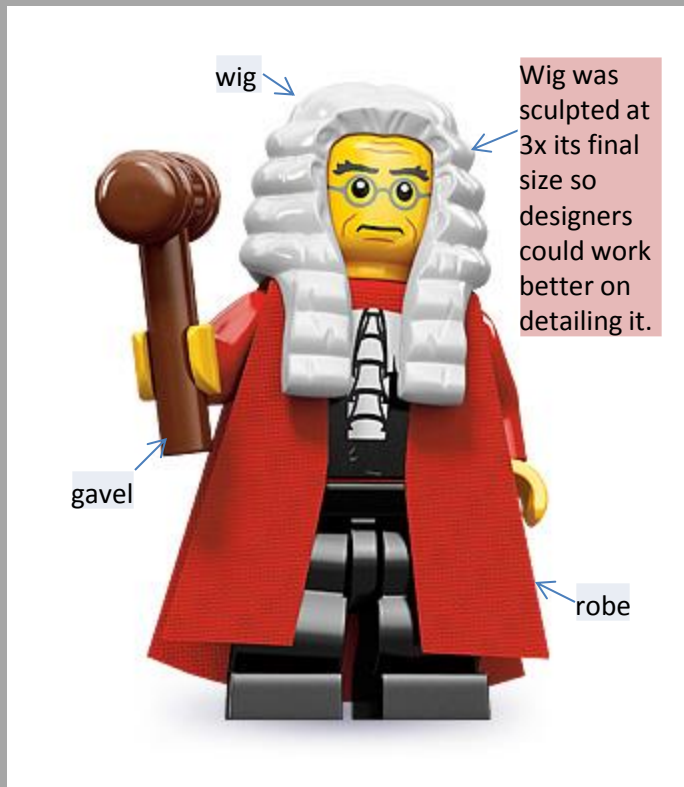

It's gotten to be such a big problem that the Fortune Teller has started second-guessing her own second sight. Outside the court, though, he keeps on judging everything he sees. He judges how well flowers are arranged in gardens, how tasty the condiments are on his burger, and how talented people are as musicians if they happen to whistle as they walk down the street. The grizzled Sea Captain has been a nautical man his whole life, and it's left him kind of jaded. Although he loves ocean adventure, these days it seems like nothing is quite exciting enough. When you've been to as many exotic places and seen as many unexpected sights as he has, you start to get used to it all.

Experiences that would amaze and thrill a younger sailor – like roaring whirlpools, thundering typhoons, and giant octopus attacks – just make the Sea Captain shrug and double-check his ship's course. The rest of his crew wonders what it would take to impress their Cap'n...and they're a little afraid of discovering the answer some day!

Nothing is more important to the Revolutionary Soldier than freedom. His greatest wish is to see all people be free of hardship and oppression, and he'll do everything he can to help make it a reality.

The Revolutionary Soldier doesn't like fighting, but if that's what it will take to protect his fellow Minifigures, then that's what he'll have to do. With his musket in his hand and his best powdered wig on his head, he's here to stand up for independence and the rights of the little guy!

Quote is a play on Patrick Henry's famous speech.

- Once, in the heat of battle, an enemy grabbed the Revolutionary Soldier's wig and held it hostage for a pack of licorice allsorts. They settled for caramels because licorice allsorts weren't invented yet.

With the help of his lucky mitt, the Baseball Fielder can catch just about anything. From line drives to pop flies, if it’s in the air and heading his way, you can trust that it will end up safely in his big leather glove.

And baseballs aren’t the only thing that the Baseball Fielder catches. From his position in the outfield, he’s caught souvenirs dropped by fans, runaway rockets, and a falling star or two. He once even caught a bad cold, but then he had to sit out of the game for half a season!

- The Baseball Fielder is going for the world record for most games played. He already holds the world record for strangest object ever caught in a major league baseball game: a skydiver.

Everything the Trendsetter does becomes the next big thing. If she buys a certain phone, so does everybody else. If she reads a particular magazine, everyone else reads it too. All of the Minifigures that she meets want to look like her, act like her, and do all of the same things she likes to do.

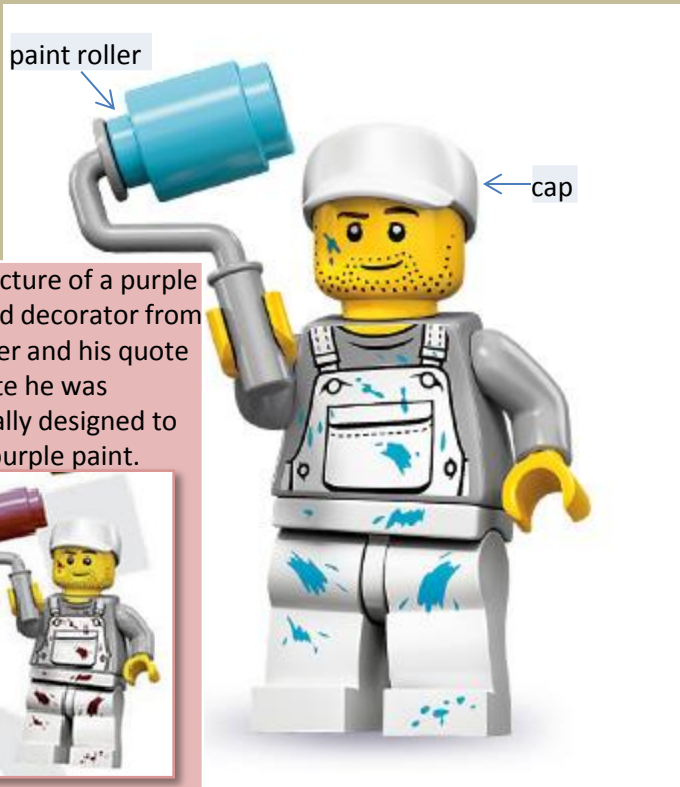

The Trendsetter has to really think about the trends she’s going to set. If everybody buys her favorite food and clothes, then there won’t be any left for her, and if people know what movie she’s planning to see, the theater might sell out before she gets there. She isn’t sure why everybody seems to want to be just like her...but she has to admit that she doesn’t mind the attention one bit!

- The Trendsetter’s upcoming fad projects include crocheted suits and ties, gourmet cooking with broccoli and celery, and purses and school bags made from LEGO® bricks.

This Decorator does more than just paint houses. He’s also responsible for coloring each and every LEGO® brick! You didn’t think that they just popped out of a big machine that way, did you?

With the help of his handy roller, the Decorator adds shade and tint to elements as they come down the production line. He paints them on all sides, making sure to coat each stud on top and tube underneath, and he takes care to get any special details just right. So the next time you reach into a big box of bricks, remember who to thank for making them look so bright and colorful!

- The Decorator’s biggest dream is to paint the worlds’ mountains and deserts in every color of the rainbow, so when people in airplanes look out the windows, they’ll have something beautiful to look at.

Make no mistake: your bike may not look very pretty by the time the Motorcycle Mechanic gets done with it. His method of fixing up a part involves banging on it with his wrench until it works, and he says that any resulting dents, clanks or rattles just give a cycle more personality. But you’ll have to admit that after one of his repair jobs, it definitely runs faster, further, and above all LOUDER than ever before!

- Motorcycle Mechanic guy is working on a very secret project: the most monstrous motorcycle ever made to drive the open road. When it’s finished, it will include a hot tub, a burger bar and a helipad.

Shining and golden from the top of his tall top hat to the tips of his toes, he may be discovered in all sorts of unexpected places, but he never seems to turn up exactly when and where you’re looking for him. According to legend, Mr. Gold will bring you luck if you happen to spot him...or is it that you’ll need to have a lot of luck to find him? Either way, everybody wants to find the mysterious Golden Minifigure – but only a fortunate few will succeed!

- It is said that Mr. Gold speaks 6,502 languages. (Some of them are not in use anymore. Like Gibberish or Elvish.) So no matter where in the world he pops up, he can talk with people and make new friends.

There isn't a monster, prison tower, or evil tyrant in the world that the Barbarian wouldn't try to demolish. With powerful muscles from a life in the savage wilderness and a sword gripped in each hand, he smashes, bashes, and crashes his way through every obstacle in his path, no matter how tough or dangerous it may be.

People say that the Barbarian is utterly unstoppable, and they're almost right. He doesn't blink at ogres, trolls, or many-headed hydras, and he laughs in the faces of evil sorcerers and axe-wielding viziers. So what's the one thing that gives this burly brawler pause? He's terrible at spelling. That's why he's started spending his weekends at the library, practicing his reading!

He thinks he's the spookiest thing around, since no one has ever told him that with his smiling face and button eyes, he actually doesn't look all that scary. Although he can't tell through his straw-stuffed noggin, the Scarecrow's wide-brimmed old hat has become a favorite perch for a local crow. With the sheer volume and pitch-changes of her yodeling song, the Pretzel Girl shares all of the latest news with her fellow yodelers in distant towns, and they yodel right back with everything that's going on with them. Fortunately, he's well prepared thanks to his friends. With a knowledge of traps learned from the Forest Maiden, lessons in stealth from the Elf, and the Leprechaun's book full of pranks, the Island Warrior has everything he needs to send any pesky plunderers who try to invade his island packing!

It must be said that a big, round, flat head isn't the most aerodynamic thing to have sitting on top of your shoulders when you're sprinting at full speed. It's nearly gotten the Gingerbread Man caught a few times. He's tried turning it sideways, but then he can't see where he's going!

The Holiday Elf knows how to make any kind of toy in the world, whether classic or brand-new. He can wrap a gift so quickly that it seems like magic, and he does it all with a cheerful smile. Once upon a time, the Yeti was barely more than a legend. Dwelling all alone up on his snowy mountaintop, he was rarely glimpsed by travelers, and those who did spot him were even less often believed. The Yeti himself was starting to think that he might just be a myth.

But that changed the day he looked himself up on the internet. Everyone seemed to be talking about him there, and they knew all about him – from his favorite foods to his foot size. He was famous! Now that he knows he’s a celebrity, the no-longer-shy Yeti is just waiting for crowds of new friends to arrive. He can’t wait to meet them!

Whether he's rappelling down from a helicopter in high winds or scaling up a snowy slope with medical supplies, he never gives up and he never loses hope.

And it's not just his fellow citizens that he helps, either. In his years of experience, the Mountain Climber has rescued stranded mountain goats, birds that have gotten lost in mid-migration, and even the Yeti once when a particularly loud yodel buried the creature in snow. After all that hard work, he's always got hot chocolate and soup waiting for him when the rescue's done!

With a mask to shield his eyes from sparks and bright light, and heavy-duty overalls to protect the rest of him, the Welder sets to work with his welding torch in hand. She’ll spend all night in her lab analyzing how to connect bricks of different sizes and shapes (she won the coveted Nobrick Prize for her discovery of the theoretical System/DUPLO® Interface!), or how to mix two colors in one element.

Thanks to the Scientist’s tireless research, Minifigures that have misplaced their legs can now attach new pieces to let them swim like fish, slither like snakes, and stomp around like robots. Her studies of a certain outer dimension have even perfected a method for swapping body parts at will!

The Saxophone Player does not seek fame or fortune. He doesn't record albums, and he doesn't take requests. But if you stand quietly and listen to him play for a while, you might just start to understand what he's saying...and you might learn a thing or two, too.

If you want to eat what she thinks you should eat, then there’s no problem at all...but if you ask for the wrong thing, then up goes her eyebrow and you know you’re in trouble!

Oh, she’ll bring you your food promptly and courteously, even if you ask for peanut butter and jelly with gravy or roast chicken with a scoop of ice cream on top. But you’ll be able to tell by the way she looks at you as she rolls up on her skates that the Diner Waitress highly disapproves of your menu selection. Better leave a big tip!

And the stories those photos tell about the people she's met and the places she's traveled! In her long and adventure-filled life, Grandma has dug for treasure with Johnny Thunder, sailed around the world with the Fisherman, and even gone into space. But she says that the very best adventure of all...is being a Grandma!

He knows every law by heart, he always keeps his uniform neat, and he only takes off his helmet in the presence of the Queen.

The Constable often works with the Detective on important cases. He may not be able to solve every crime mystery all on his own, but everyone appreciates his pluck and enthusiasm, not to mention his extraordinary ability to get lawbreakers to give up simply by giving them a good talking-to!
